

Jennifer Sue Bond

Senior Advisor, International Policy Studies
Council on Competitiveness

Jennifer Sue Bond, currently serves as Senior Advisor for International Affairs at the Council on Competitiveness and helped to frame and develop the Council's Mexico initiative. She is the former Director of the Science & Engineering Indicators Program at the National Science Foundation, where she expanded greatly the international coverage of this flagship report of the National Science Board. Ms Bond worked for Senator Joseph Lieberman as an expert on education policy for two years and previously worked as the Senior International Policy Analyst at the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy. She also has held research positions at MIT, the World Bank, the Board on Science, Technology and International Development at National Academy of Sciences, and was the Director of the Science Policy Unit at the Brazilian Space Research Institute.

For over a decade she was a United States Representative to the OECD and the Vice Chair of OECD's National Experts on Science, Technology and Industry Indicators – NESTI. She also has worked with the EU on several issues including the Community Innovation Surveys, Public Attitudes Towards Science and Technology, and Mega-Science Issues. She has been on the Editorial Board of the APEC/PECC Science and Technology Profile and the Ibero- and InterAmerican Network on Science and Technology Indicators (RICYT) and served on the International Advisory Council for the University of Sao Paulo, Brazil. Ms. Bond holds a B.A. from Stanford University in International Affairs/Political Science and a Masters' Degree in Science, Technology and Public Policy from George Washington University. She speaks French, Spanish and Portuguese; has studied and worked in France and Brazil; and has traveled and lectured extensively in Europe, Latin America, Asia and Australia. She is a member and Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Sciences and a member of the Cosmos Club in Washington D.C.